

Forest Posters

Although we still have a lot to learn about forests, there is an enormous amount of information available today.

One of the biggest hurdles to protecting and planting forests is that not everybody knows why they are needed and how to do it. Also many people think forests are just an issue for farmers and hill tribe people.

1. Collect seeds, leaves, small twigs and other natural materials around your home or school that are dry.

If the problem of forest destruction and biodiversity degradation is to be tackled, then everybody needs to take some responsibility.

2. Choose an environmental message you would like to tell people about.

Everyone with forest knowledge, including children, has a role to play. Don't work alone.

3. On a poster draw an outline of what your collage or poster will look like.

4. Using clear-drying glue, stick your natural material unto you paper to enhance the effect of your message.

Tell other people what you have found out and what needs to be done.

Tell other people how to plant a forest!
